About this report

This report tracks the population of the City of Kingston and the towns around it, using four Census Bureau sources: annual population estimates for cities and towns, county estimates of births, deaths and migration, the decennial census, and the American Community Survey (ACS). The Kingston area here means Kingston (city), Saugerties, Ulster, Esopus, Rhinebeck, Woodstock, Hurley, Marbletown, Rosendale, and Kingston (town). Maps cover every city and town in Ulster County, Dutchess County, and Greene County.

The 2020 Census counted 24,065 residents in the City of Kingston, against 23,853 in April 2010. The Census Bureau's most recent estimate, for July 1, 2025, is 23,942.

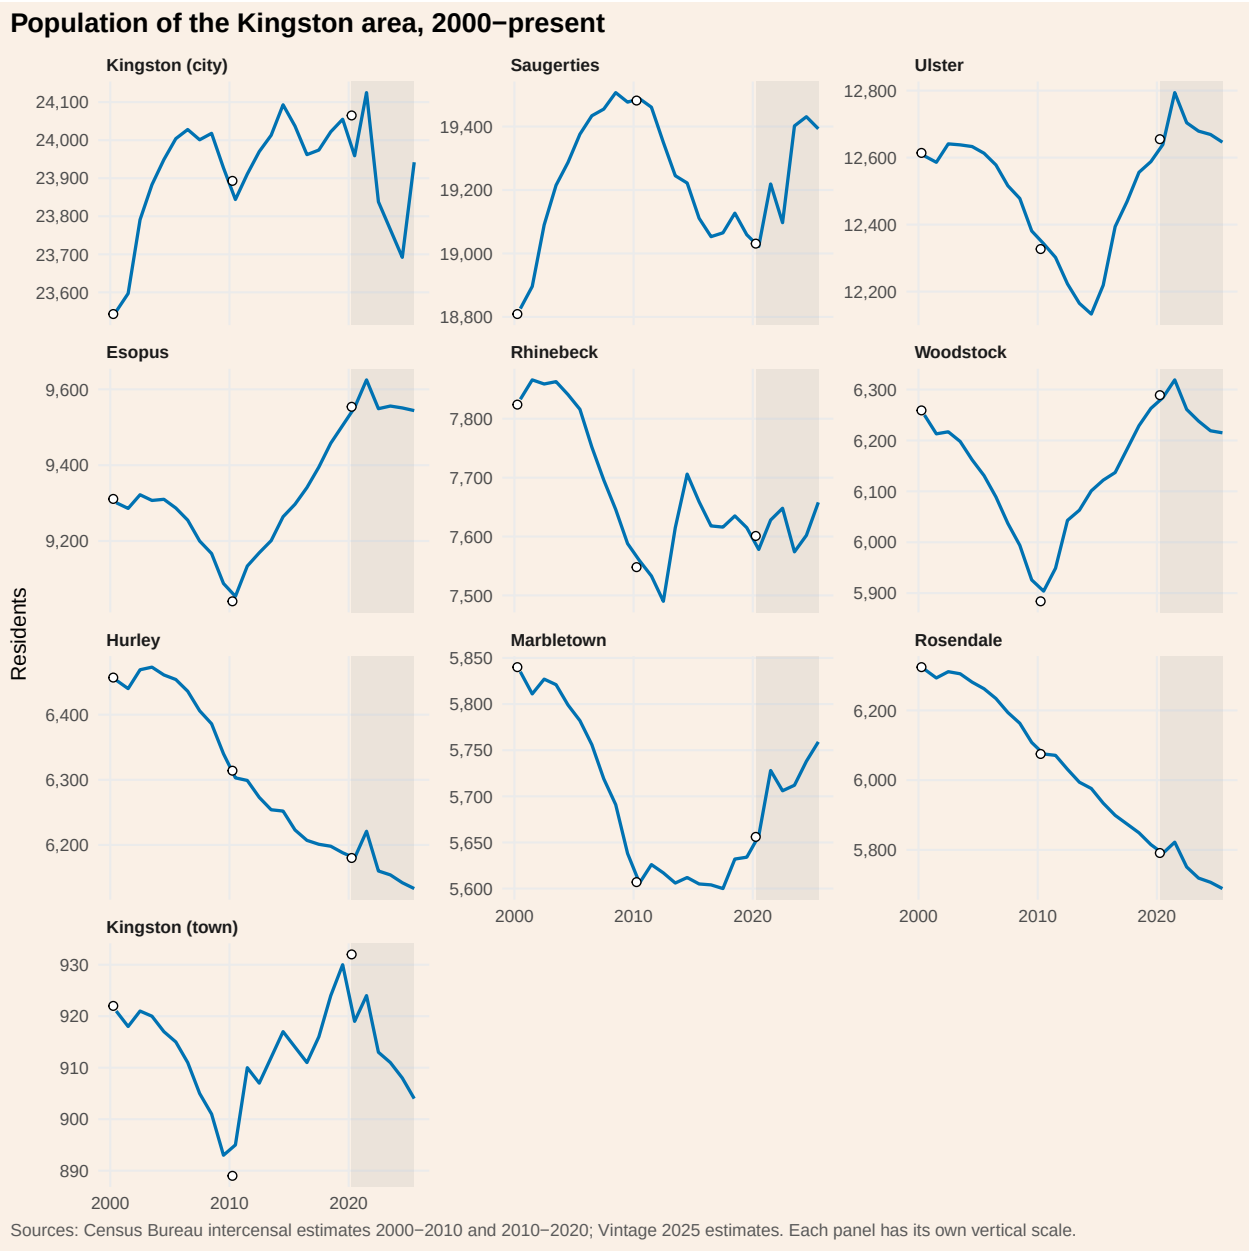

Where Kingston sits

Cities and towns of Ulster, Dutchess, and Greene counties. Census cartographic boundaries, 2024.

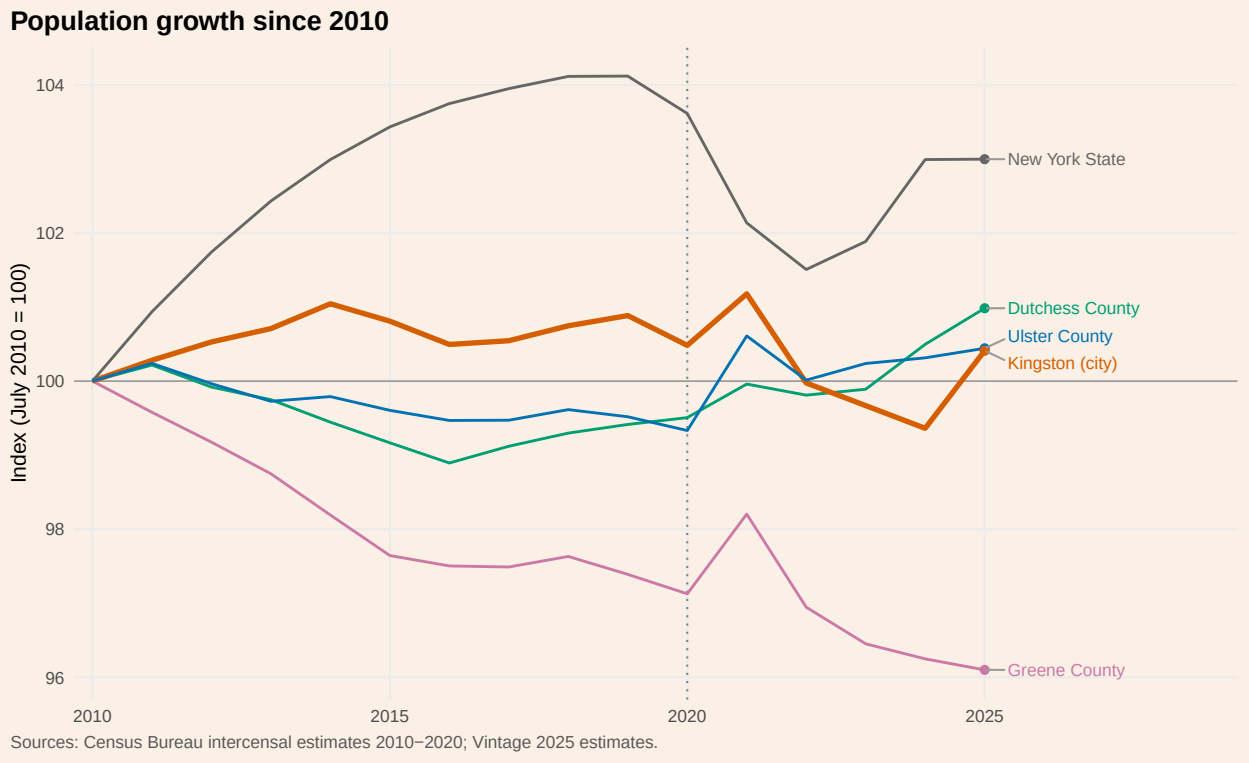

Population since 2000

Each line is the Census Bureau's July 1 estimate; the circles are the April 1 benchmarks from the 2000, 2010 and 2020 censuses. The shaded area marks the years since the 2020 Census, which come from the current estimates series rather than from the reconciled intercensal series.

Kingston in context

Population indexed to July 2010 = 100, so places of very different size can be compared on one scale.

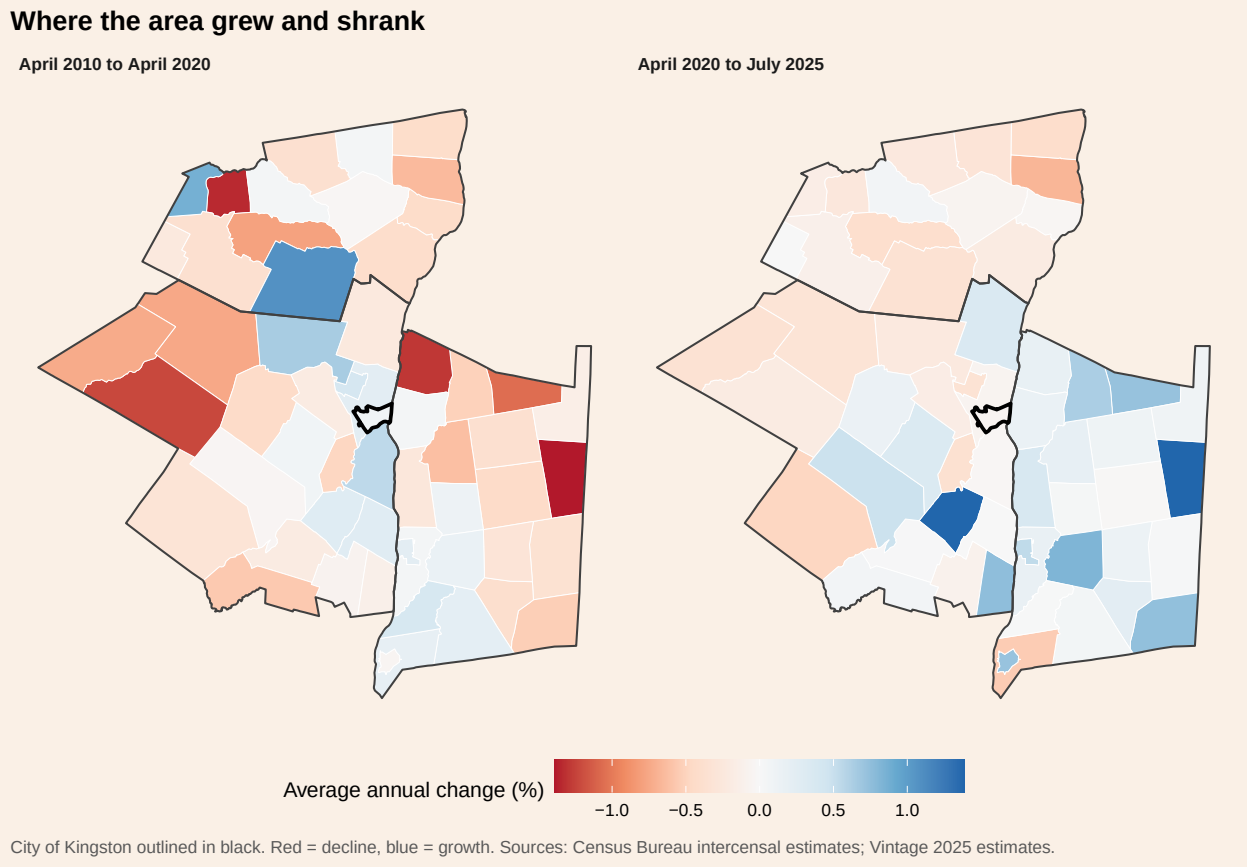

Growth before and after 2020

Average annual growth, compounded, over two periods: the decade between the 2010 and 2020 censuses, and the years since. Each period is measured within a single Census series, so the change of series in 2020 does not distort it.

What is driving change in Ulster County

The Census Bureau splits each county's population change into natural change (births minus deaths), net domestic migration (moves to and from other U.S. counties, including New York City), and net international migration. These figures exist for counties only, not for cities and towns.

Diamonds show the total change, which also includes a residual the Census Bureau cannot assign to a component

Housing and population

Who lives here

These figures come from the American Community Survey, which samples a small share of households each year and pools five years of responses for places this size. Every estimate carries a margin of error; the bars below show 90% intervals. The periods compared do not overlap, as the Census Bureau advises.

Age

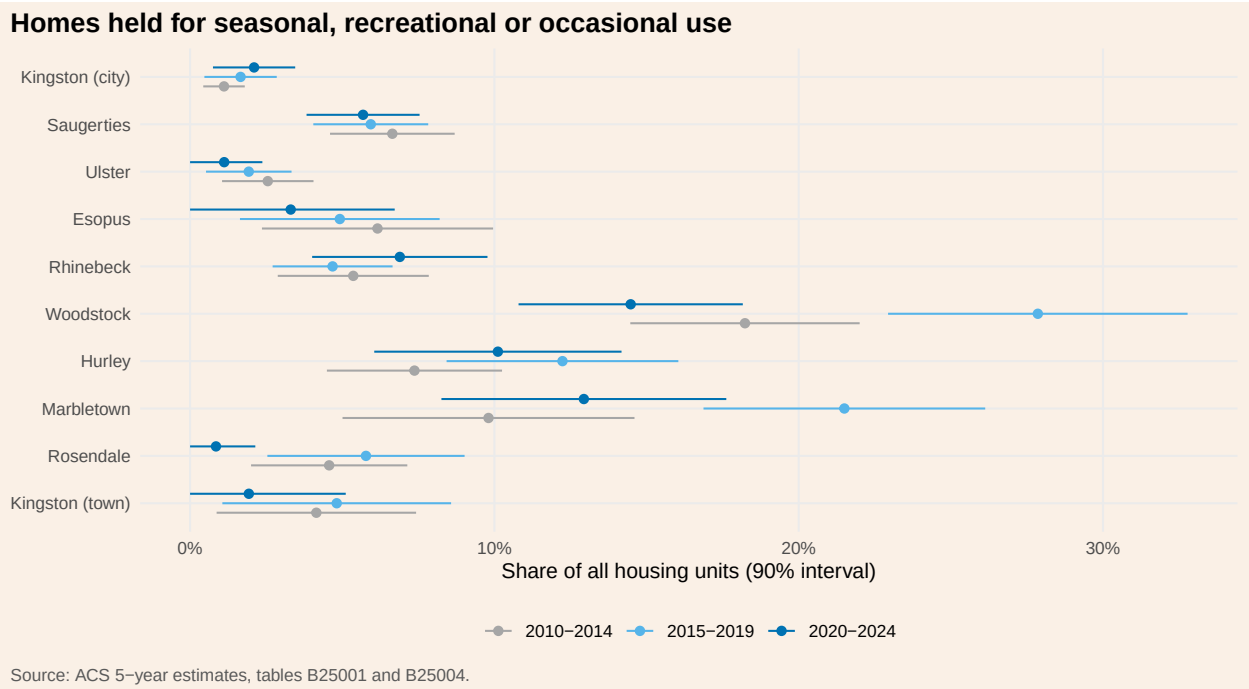

Where newcomers came from

Share of residents who lived somewhere else one year earlier. Moves from New York City count as moves from another New York county.

Source: ACS 5−year estimates, table B07003.

Seasonal homes

Source: ACS 5−year estimates, tables B25001 and B25004.

Income, rents and home values

Change between the two most recent non-overlapping periods. Dollar figures are in each period's own (nominal) dollars, so part of every increase is inflation. An asterisk marks a change that is statistically significant at the 90% level.

Notes on the data

- Annual estimates come from the Census Bureau's Population Estimates Program. For cities and towns these are modelled, mainly from changes in housing units, not counted, and they carry no margin of error. Each new vintage revises every year back to the last census. The 2000–2010 and 2010–2020 series are intercensal estimates, adjusted to agree with the census at both ends of the decade; the years since 2020 are Vintage 2025 estimates.
- Components of change (births, deaths, migration) are produced only for counties. Figures before July 2020 come from Vintage 2020, which was not revised after the 2020 Census, so the two halves of that chart are not perfectly consistent.
- Decennial census counts for 2020 include noise added for privacy (differential privacy). At the scale of a town the effect on total population is small; housing unit totals were not altered.
- ACS figures are survey estimates with margins of error at the 90% level. Small towns can have wide intervals; a change is reported as significant only when it exceeds the combined margin of error of the two periods.
- Data versions in this report: Vintage 2025 population estimates; ACS 5-year periods 2010-2014, 2015-2019, and 2020-2024; boundaries from 2024.
